Abstracts for a Research Paper/Plan B Project typically include an introduction, research/scholarly methods used, results (even if preliminary), and a conclusion.

- Introduction: Include the research question/hypothesis and a brief background (if space permits).
- Methods: Show the validity of the research by describing the design of the project. Include applicable information, such as the setting of the research, number of subjects and how they were selected, and methods used to measure/analyze the data.
- Results: Summarize the findings.
- Conclusion: State what can be concluded from the project and the implications of the research.
