Educational Leadership in the Asia-Pacific Region (EdLeads)

Two Five-Week Summer Sessions On-Campus
Work Online with Advisor During School Year

Cohort VIII to Begin in Summer 2014

EdLeads is a 30-credit hour program designed to meet the needs of educators who wish to enroll in a program of graduate studies leading to the M.Ed. degree in Educational Foundations. The program can be pursued without career interruption through a combination of online work and on-campus classes concentrated over two consecutive summer terms that last five weeks each.

The entire program may be completed in less than fifteen months (including online and on-campus interactions from May 2014 to August 2015).

EdLeads emphasizes exploration of educational issues from cultural, philosophical, historical, and international perspectives. It embraces the idea of professional leadership for teachers and other educators; students learn from each other in a vibrant community that invites intellectual stimulation and social interaction.

In 1999, the Educational Leadership in the Asia-Pacific Region Master’s in Education Degree Program received the Exemplary Program Award from the North American Association of Summer Sessions. The program was selected for receipt of this prestigious award from among 400 universities and colleges throughout North America.
